Confectionery manufacture has been dominated by large-scale industrial processing for several decades. It involves food rich in sugar and often referred to as a packaging and refer to the art of creating forms of sugar-based desserts or subtleties (slimness or sotely), often with pastillage. The simplest packaging used by man was honey, dating back to over 3000 years ago. The traditional pastry shop dates back to ancient times and continued to be eaten through the Middle Ages in the modern era. Sugar pastry has developed around the properties of an ingredient - sucrose. It's a non-reducing disaccharide. The main ingredient in the whole pastry is the sucrose, which in its refined shape tastes little apart its intrinsic sweetness. This manual contains packaging in the pastry sector, sugar pastry structure, pastry aroma, pastry plant, ingredients, quality control and chemical analysis, medicated pastry and chewing gum, chocolate flow properties, general technical aspects of industrial sugar pastry production, manufacturing of industrial sugar pastries, production of production of industrial sugar pastries, production of industrial pastries, production of industrial pastry production and liqueur production. The production of pastry is not a scientific industry, since these products have traditionally been created by qualified pastries that work empirically. The purpose of this manual is to give the reader a perspective on different processes and techniques that are generally followed in the pastry industry. The plot and technological properties of pastry products are largely controlled by its structure.
